

8-YEAR-OLD GIRL HAS 14-YEAR-OLD BRAIN, TESTS SHOW

Susan Mitchell Amazes Teachers' College Professors by Mentality.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY is interested in the latest child prodigy, Susan Mitchell, eight, daughter of Mrs. Nellie Mitchell, No. 224 West 74th Street.

Mentally, Susan is fourteen years old, according to a test made by one of the faculty of Teachers' College. She passed some sixteen-year-old tests and one eighteen-year-old test.

Susan could count in French, in four.

She wrote delightful little stories of an imaginative character.

She made up little tunes instead of singing nursery songs when she was a baby.

When she reads she keeps a dictionary to see what strange words mean.

In a test she gave correct definitions for fifty out of one hundred words. A child of her age is supposed to know only twenty of them.

On her mother's side she is related to the family of Gen. Grant. Her only ambition now is to go to Scotland, nobody knows why.

Newspaper Costs Still Increase. HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 10.—Newspaper publishing costs are now at their highest point and are still increasing, said T. R. Williams of Pittsburgh, President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. Under such conditions, Mr. Williams added, there is no possibility of decreasing advertising rates.

Who are the Customers for U.S. Tires

ONCE in a while even now somebody buys a car just to make the neighbors sit up and take notice.

But ninety-nine per cent of American families buy a car because they know of ten times more useful ways to use it than even car-makers themselves can think of.

The greatest thing that ever happened to the motor industry was when the motor car achieved the dignity of being an essential item in the family budget.

A fact just as wholesome in its bearing on the tire business.

DURING 1920 the makers of United States Tires had their chance to prove the mental good health of the average American citizen.

Nobody can find out anything about motorists by jumping more than 8,000,000 of them together as a mere mass of tire prospects. Nor by jumping into a free-for-all stampede for their tire-money.

But when you think of them as individual, separate persons, surprising things happen.

It is the United States policy to make tires for the men and women who ride in the cars—not just for cars, no matter what price, weight or wheel-base.

It is this same policy that remembers that Americans were raised on quality ideas about merchandise. When was there ever any faith in job-lotters and price-dickerers?

ALL through 1920 every pressure was brought to bear to lower U. S. standards in order to get out more tires.

But the United States Rubber Company didn't intend to lower standards just to sell more tires.

It held to its standards.

As a result it satisfied more people. It registered economy in more individual pocket-books.

These people had their own ideas about their own money. They placed emphasis on confidence.

They passed by the flamboyant tire-bargains on every street in the country, and went calmly to the legitimate dealer and bought tires certified by the United States quality-mark.

They got the best of it.

THIS is why the Company feels that it has more than a "market." It has a following. Independent-thinking, brass-tack human beings.

In 1921 this following will get fresh, live tires of current production.

There will be more and better U. S. Tires this year. And there will be many thousands more people added to the long nation-wide roll of customers for United States products.
